

Elastic Platform

Middleware for the execution of custom applications, their communication, and data storage is offered via a self-service interface over a network.

How do cloud offerings providing execution environments behave and how should they be used in applications?

