

Timeout-based Message Processor

Clients acknowledge message processing to ensure that messages are handled. If a message is not acknowledged after a certain timeout, it is processed again.

How can an application guarantee that all handled messages are processed at-least-once?

