

Hybrid Data

Data of varying size is hosted in an elastic cloud while the remainder of an application resides in a static environment.

How can a data handling functionality that experiences varying workload be hosted in an elastic cloud while the rest of the application is located in a static data center?

