Transaction-based Delivery

Clients retrieve messages under a transactional context to ensure that messages are received by a handling component.

How can it be ensured that messages are only deleted from a message queue if they have been received successfully?