Stateless Component

State is handled external of application components to ease their scaling-out and to make the application more tolerant to component failures.

How can elasticity and robustness of an application component be increased?