Update Transition Process

When a new application component version, middleware versions etc. become available, running application components are updated seamlessly.

How can application components of a distributed application be updated seamlessly?