Message Mover

Messages are moved automatically between different cloud providers to provide unified access to application components using messaging.

How can message queues of different providers be integrated without an impact on the application components using them?